

Bryn Mawr College is a distinguished liberal arts college for women with a vibrant faculty of scholar-teachers, a talented staff and intellectually curious students eager to make a difference in the world. The College is committed to increasing the diversity of its students, faculty, staff, and curricular offerings with a particular focus on enhancing ethnic and racial diversity and advancing social justice and inclusion. We believe diversity strengthens our community and enriches the education of our students. We have a student body of 1,421 undergraduates (32 percent are U.S. students of color and 15 percent are international students). There are 353 graduate students in coeducational graduate programs in social work, humanities and science. Bryn Mawr College is located in metropolitan Philadelphia and enjoys strong consortial relationships with Haverford College, Swarthmore College, and the University of Pennsylvania. Bryn Mawr College is an equal-opportunity employer; candidates from underrepresented groups and women are especially encouraged to apply.

The Department of Biology at Bryn Mawr College invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track Assistant Professor position to begin August 1, 2023 in the area of Physiology, broadly defined, with expertise at the organismal level. The successful candidate will be expected to be part of developing and teaching a diverse and inclusive curriculum, including interdisciplinary programs and other college-wide initiatives such as the 360 Program and the Emily Balch Seminars. Specific teaching responsibilities include courses in animal or human physiology and in the candidate's area of expertise, as well as participation in the team-taught introductory biology sequence. Candidates who have the potential to contribute to the major in Neuroscience are especially encouraged to apply. The successful candidate will also be expected to maintain an exte.004 26.68 -2 (. B)-3

Bryn Mawr College is located in metropolitan Philadelphia and enjoys strong consortial relationships with Haverford College, Swarthmore College, and the University of Pennsylvania. Bryn Mawr College is an equal-opportunity employer; candidates from underrepresented groups and women are especially encouraged to apply.

---

The Department of French and Francophone Studies at Bryn Mawr College invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track Assistant Professor position to begin August 1, 2023 in theater and/or performance studies, with other possible subfields in visual studies, new media, and ecocriticism. Research in 19th-Century French and Francophone Studies would also be considered an asset. The position includes the directorship of the internationally respected . Administrative experience, especially in study abroad programs, is desired, but not required. Candidates must have demonstrated teaching excellence and should expect to Bryn Mawr College is an equal-opportunity employer; candidates from underrepresented groups and women are especially encouraged to apply.

---

The Program in International Studies at Bryn Mawr College, an interdisciplinary collaboration among faculty across the Social Sciences, Humanities and Sciences, invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track Assistant Professor position in International Development, broadly conceived, to begin August 1, 2023. The academic discipline of the applicant is open, but candidates with expertise in international social justice, humanitarianism, or human rights advocacy are strongly encouraged to apply. Close consideration will be given to applicants who are returning to the academy from field experience in international organizations and to applicants who have developed comparable programs at other institutions. Candidates must have completed all Ph.D. requirements by the start date while demonstrating evidence of an established research program and a commitment to undergraduate teaching.

The successful candidate will teach core courses within the International Studies major as well as develop additional core and elective courses within their own area of expertise, and will be expected to be part of developing and teaching a diverse and inclusive undergraduate curriculum that includes interdisciplinary programs and other college-wide initiatives such as the 360 Program and the Emily Balch Seminars.

To apply for this position, candidates must submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, statement of teaching philosophy, research statement, and a statement of demonstrated commitment to diversity and inclusion to the Program in International Studies Search Committee via Interfolio at: <http://apply.interfolio.com/108997>. In addition, candidates should arrange for three letters of recommendation to be submitted via Interfolio to the International Studies Program Search Committee. Applications received by November 15, 2022 will receive full consideration.

The College will be as flexible as possible in determining the nature of any interviews or meetings (virtual/remote and/or in-person interaction) that are conducted for this search.

Bryn Mawr College is a distinguished liberal arts college for women with a vibrant faculty of scholar-teachers, a talented staff and intellectually curious students eager to make a difference in the world. The College is committed to increasing diversity and inclusion in all areas of the college.

percent are U.S. students of color and 15 percent are international students). There are 353 graduate students in coeducational graduate programs in social work, humanities and science. Bryn Mawr College is located in metropolitan Philadelphia and enjoys strong consortial relationships with Haverford College, Swarthmore College, and the University of Pennsylvania. Bryn Mawr College is an equal-opportunity employer; candidates from underrepresented groups and women are especially encouraged to apply.

---

The Department of Sociology at Bryn Mawr College invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track Assistant Professor position in Sociology to begin August 1, 2023. We are searching for a colleague specializing, domestically and/or globally, in the areas of economic sociology, social networks, organizational sociology, and/or sociology of law. The successful candidate will contribute to the development and teaching of a diverse and inclusive undergraduate curriculum, including interdisciplinary programs and college-wide initiatives such as the 360 Program and the Emily Balch Seminars. A Ph.D. in Sociology is preferred; we also welcome applications from related fields. Candidates must have completed all Ph.D. requirements by the start date.

To apply for this position, candidates must submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, teaching philosophy, research statement, and a statement of demonstrated commitment to diversity and inclusion to the Department of Sociology Search Committee via Interfolio at: <http://apply.interfolio.com/108609>. In addition, candidates should arrange for three letters of recommendation to be submitted via Interfolio to the Sociology Department Search Committee. Applications received by September 30, 2022 will receive full consideration.

The College will be as flexible as possible in determining the nature of any interviews or meetings (virtual/remote and/or in-person interaction) that are conducted for this search.

Bryn Mawr College is a distinguished liberal arts college for women with a vibrant faculty of scholar-teachers, a talented staff and intellectually curious students eager to make a difference in the world. The College is committed to increasing the diversity of its students, faculty, staff, and curricular offerings with a particular focus on enhancing ethnic and racial diversity and advancing social justice and inclusion. We believe diversity strengthens our community and enriches the education of our students. We have a student body of 1,421 undergraduates (32 percent are U.S. students of color and 15 percent are international students). There are 352 graduate students in coeducational graduate programs in social work, humanities and science. Bryn Mawr College is located in metropolitan Philadelphia and enjoys strong consortial relationships with Haverford College, Swarthmore College, and the University of Pennsylvania. Bryn Mawr College is an equal-opportunity employer; candidates from underrepresented groups and women are especially encouraged to apply.

the Transnational Italian Department and organize our major around a global focus at the intersection with other fields such as: philosophy, intellectual history, architecture, music studies, environmental humanities/ethics/eco-criticism. Candidates should also have expertise in foreign language pedagogy with the capacity to coordinate and teach our rigorous beginning language program. The successful candidate will be expected to be part of developing and teaching a diverse and inclusive curriculum, including interdisciplinary programs and other college-wide initiatives such as the 360 Program and the Emily Balch Seminars. A Ph.D. is required by the start date.

To apply for this position, candidates must submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, teaching philosophy (one to two pages), research statement (one to two pages), a statement of demonstrated commitment to diversity and inclusion (one to two pages), and evidence of excellence in undergraduate Italian language instruction, which may include beginning-level